

Abstract

The invention relates to a method for producing geotextiles with a defined adjustable isotropy, particularly of the mechanical properties in the longitudinal transverse direction.